Foolish and Fatal Experiment.
The Australian correspondent of the London Times relates the following story:

Considerable sensation has been excited in Melbourne this month by the lamentable death of Mr. Drummond, a police magistrate, from the bite of a tiger snake. Against the remonstrances of friends, and for the purpose, as he proposed, of detecting a charlatan named Shires, who was exhibiting about the town, by allowing himself to be bitten by snakes, and who professed to possess and apply a sovereign remedy against all snake poisons, Mr. Drummond persisted in being bitten by one of Shires' snakes, declaring that they must be harmless, and that Shires was only an impostor. Shires was at first averse to allowing Mr. Drummond to be bitten, and warned him of the risk he ran; but Mr. Drummond would not be put off. He was bitten above the wrist, and a few minutes afterwards he fainted away, although the so-called remedy was at once rubbed over the part bitten. Mr. Drummond, however, recovered in a few minutes from his stupor, and very shortly afterwards appeared to be quite well. He went home, but was followed by two medical friends, who, apprehensive of serious consequences, were anxious to apply the usual remedies, in such cases. Mr. Drummond, however, refused their proffered attentions, and went to bed. The next morning all the usual signs of snake poisoning appeared upon him; he became rapidly worse, and he died from exhaustion within a very few hours. So obscure was the action of the poison that no animal of the vipers after death, and Prof. Halford, of the Melbourne University, after a post mortem examination, could only detect a portion of the effects of the poison in the system. He observed that the blood corpuscles had been altered through the action of the poison, and that a powerful microscope. Mr. Drummond, who was a man of considerable ability, has left a widow and a young and numerous family. Shires, the exhibitor, has been committed to take this trial for man-slaughter. Strange to say, this man has certainly been bitten over and over again by the most venomous snakes, and whether his remedy has any value in it or not—it has been pronounced worthless by medical men—he has hitherto come off unharmed. There can be no deception, because the snakes which have bitten him have immediately before, as well as afterward, bitten fowls and rabbits, which have died instantaneously. Professor Halford, on being asked by the Coroner how Shires' escapes were to be accounted for, answered that he supposed his system had become proof against the effects of the poison. But the question still comes back on us, how did Shires' system first become proof against this poison, as suggested? At best, the mystery is only moved a little further off by the Professor's theory, and Shires himself throws no light on this interesting point of physiology.

A GOOD MARRIAGE CEREMONY.—The following curious custom of the Nestorian Christians is commended to the attention of the young gentlemen and young ladies of our country who propose to commit matrimony. After the marriage ceremony has been performed the wedding party is taken in wagons from the church to the bridegroom's father. When the second wagon, in which the bride is seated, reaches the house the gate opening into the yard in which the house is situated, it is tied, and the bridegroom's mother comes to meet it with a baby and three other children in her arms. She throws the baby and the clothes into the arms of the bride, who is required to dress and undress the baby three times in the presence of the mother-in-law, who watches every movement as only a mother-in-law can watch a daughter-in-law. If the newly made bride does not perform the operation to the satisfaction of her severe judge, she is considered unfit for her new position, the wagon turned around and she is taken back home for further instruction, and the poor bridegroom is compelled to live in single blessedness until his wife is educated up to the proper standard.

GEN. FORREST AFTER THE KUKLUX.—About three days ago a report reached Gen. Forrest in this city that a number of bushwhackers, who were known to be deserters from the Confederate army, were engaged in making raids on the colored people of Madison county, with faces blackened and otherwise disguised, calling themselves members of the Kuklux Klan, and ordering all arms, such as pistols and guns, to be delivered into their possession. The General determined to put a stop to the marauding of these gentry, so he called together a few of his old followers in the army, and has dispatched them to Madison, with instructions to arrest the Kukluxes and hand them over to the civil authorities for punishment. The result of the expedition is yet unknown.—Memphis Appeal.
